What's New In SpeedNetCheck?

SpeedNetCheck (SNCheck) is a small portable C# (or VB) application that automatically measures the speed of your local, your ISP or a internet connection. It uses a simple ping to probe a client in the local internet connection and calculates the throughput. The application runs a simple ping from the local client to the external server. The application runs in a loop, that can be stopped by pressing the Stop button. The application displays the current throughput in real-time and can save the results in a.csv file. The application uses a simple ping utility that is part of MSNetIO and comes with the Windows SDK. The ping utility should be installed separately. The application requires the.NET Framework. If the.NET Framework is not installed, the application will display an error message. You can download the latest source code and the sample project from the links at the top of this page. You can also use the.zip archive to download the application. The archive contains all the necessary files to download and install the application. You can also use the.zip archive to download the application. The archive contains all the necessary files to download and install the application. You can also use the self-extracting.exe archive to download and install the application. To download and install the latest application: 1) Unzip the.zip archive in a temporary directory. 2) Run the SpeedNetCheck.exe application. 3) On the first run, the application will create a sample file and save the application settings in the registry. Note that you can edit the application settings in the application properties. To build the application, right-click on the project and select Build. In order to use the application, you need to copy the.NET Framework folder (usually C:\WINDOWS\Microsoft.NET\Framework\vX.X) to the application installation directory. SpeedNetCheck is part of the SpeedNetSpeed project and is also available as a Windows Phone application. The application was designed as a proof of concept to show how the SpeedNetSpeed project works. It provides a flexible and dynamic solution to measure the speed of a client or a
